Roommate Agreement

Communication is the single-most important factor in building good relationships with your roommate(s). By working with each other, this roommate agreement will help you and your roommate(s), with the assistance of your Resident Advisor (RA) or Community Director (CD), begin the process of discussing issues that have often been found to be sources of conflict. Many roommates will assume they know how someone feels, which could potentially be different from the truth. Once a potential conflict is identified, it can be resolved through open communication before a major problem develops. Your RA is here to help guide the conversations in the beginning and if a problem does arise.

Be honest with yourself and your roommate(s) now, so issues can be addressed before they arise.

This is a helpful process to go through whether living oncampus now, or off-campus later in life. Each member of a particular room, suite, or apartment will complete a copy of this form. Be aware that if a roommate change occurs, you and your new roommate(s) will develop a new agreement. Remember to keep a copy to refer back as needed.

Remember: Communication is the key!			your response.

This section is for all to input any important information you feel your other roommates may want to know about you, or feel they should know. This is to help make sure you feel comfortable in your space. Topics to consider are dietary restrictions, religious practices, how you may identify, if you have a significant other, etc. Your RA will also be taking time throughout the semester to get to know you, but this will help spark conversations!
